Journal Aims

Social responsibility is an essential part of citizenship. This is interpreted by this journal in the widest possible context. The journal is international in its perspective and believes that in the global environment in which we live any author should speak to the greatest possible audience. It seeks to promote an ethos of inclusion and consequently embraces a broad spectrum of issues and a wide range of perspectives.

Journal Scope

The journal is interdisciplinary in scope and encourages submission from any discipline or any part of the world which addresses any element of the aims of the journal. It encompasses the full range of theoretical, methodological or substantive debates in this area. It particularly welcomes contributions which address the links between different disciplines and / or implications for societal, organisational or individual behaviour.

Issues and themes which might be addressed include:

- Corporate activity and behaviour
- Issues of gender, race and ethnicity
- Ethics and morality
- Ecology and environment

- Governmental and trans-governmental regulation
- Individuals, lifestyle and citizenship
- Consumption and its consequences
- Organisation and its alternatives

The journal publishes theoretical and empirical papers, speculative essays and review articles. Occasionally themed issues, under the guidance of a guest editor, will be published.

Articles for consideration should be written in English and should not have been published nor be currently under review elsewhere. The journal will however consider papers which have been published elsewhere in a language other than English if they are submitted with an English translation, for publication in English.
